THE JOY OF PRETENSE.

Let's dream like a child in its playing to be.

Let's us make a sky and a seat, Let's change the things 'round us by saying,

They're things as we wish them And if there is sadness or sorrow, Let's dream till we charm it away. Let's learn from the children and borrow

A saying from childhood, "Let's Play."

Let's play that the world's full of beauty;

Let's play there are roses in bloom;

Let's play that the hearth with its sorrow,

Is hidden, but joyous and glad; Let's play that we'll find on the morrow

The joys that we never have had.

Wisconsin—Robert M. La Follette, Republican.

Wyoming—John B. Kendrick, Democrat.

Total—35.

Washington, Nov. 11.—There is no longer a doubt but that Democratic will be in control of both branches of Congress. In the House the Democratic majority, however, will be so small that the balance of power will rest with four individuals, one a socialist, one a progressive, one an independent protectionist and another a prohibitionist.

Should these four men align themselves together they could absolutely control all legislation concerning which Democrats and Republicans will divide for strictly partisan reasons. Of this quartet, Mr. London of New York, socialist, will in all probability, be the strongest member. He generally votes with Democrats and his fondness for Champ Clark makes certain that leader's re-election over Mr. Mann of Illinois for the speakership.

RIBBON TRIMMINGS.

Ways of Using the New Fall's For Fall Modes.

As trimmings and the materials of which smart accessories are made of ribbons have risen to the top notch of prominence, there seems to be absolutely nothing which cannot be ribbon trimmed.

Ribbon "harnesses" are being shown for wear over a lace nightgown to make it more elaborate. They are put on separately and suspended in place. Similar harnesses are also being fashioned for wear under thin blouses. Such a harness makes a plain blouse much more elaborate and partly conceals a thin camisole which may be worn beneath it.

A strip of ribbon is sometimes introduced into the chain of a lavalliere where it comes in contact with the neck.

Strips of lace alternate with strips of ribbon to fashion many attractive negligees. Bonnet caps made of a skeleton of ribbons gathered into a knot of ruffles at the top and held together at the bottom by ruffles where they overlap are chic.

A classic neckline uses ribbon to offset the crossed neckline lines from the shoulders to waist and to outline the full panel train which hangs from the shoulders in back.

Wide metallic and brocade ribbons are deep enough to form the bodice in some evening gowns. Soft falls and gross grain ribbons in cocktail effects with tying ends are used to hold up the draperies on evening frocks of soft materials. Applique pannels will be simulated by plaits of wide ribbon at lovels to extend outward from the hips, or deep loops of two toned satin ribbon will serve to make pannel or bustle as successfully as the material.

Wide ribbons for muffs are being tied in many curious ways. Often a bow at the back of the neck makes a fetching finish. Where double ribbons are crossed jeweled slides like those used on watch chains are used to clasp the two strands together. Sometimes a tiny bunch of artificial flowers is tied in the length of the muff ribbon.

INTERESTING BREAD.

Points For Mrs. Newlywed About the Staff of Life.

The staff of life occasionally pails on the fastidious appetite. We wish sometimes that bread were flavored with vanilla or that it were rose color or that in some other way it deviated from the monotonous simplicity of its daily characteristics.

Bread can be served in so many different ways that it need never become monotonous. Of course there are many kinds of bread—made with rye or corn or Graham or some other flour. But we are talking about plain white wheat flour bread.

To begin with, bread for dinner may be served in the form of small loaves, perhaps two inches square, cut from the crumb or inside of the loaf with out crusts. These are served without butter.

Then the bread may be served in thin slices, cut in half, and two half slices, folded together, served at each place.

The bread may also be browned and dried in the oven. For this purpose it may be cut in many ways. Very thin slices cut across twice give good pieces. These are put into a lukewarm oven and dried until they are crisp, curled and golden brown, or the bread may be cut in thicker pieces and browned and dried slowly.

Puffed bread, too, is good. To prepare this take the inside of a fresh loaf, pull it to pieces and dry and brown to a light golden color these pieces in a lukewarm oven.

For luncheon bread and butter sandwiches are always good instead of bread and butter served separately. The sandwiches should be made of thin slices and should be fresh and dainty.

With the luncheon creamed soup bouillon long, narrow strips of bread and butter in sandwich form are good. Brown bread of any sort is delicious served in this way.
